

2022 Guatemala Birding

March 5-13

Tikal Extension

March 13-16

Specially Designed for the Gulf Coast Bird Observatory!

Resplendent Quetzal - R. Cahill

This is your opportunity to bird Guatemala in areas not offered by other bird tour companies, guided by Guatemala's top birder, John Cahill.

But this is not just about birds and a list. You will have the chance to visit GCBO's Tropical Forest Forever Fund's (TFFF) newest project, a reforestation program at Community Cloud Forest Conservation. CCFC is an environmental education program located near Cobán in central Guatemala. You will stay at the CCFC Center, a totally off-the-grid facility and a marvel in engineering. You will witness the wonderful work being done there, which includes the reforestation of the winter home of many birds you see in Texas, such as Golden-cheeked and Golden-winged Warbler.

In addition to fabulous birds, including the near mythical Resplendent Quetzal, Guatemala offers you an amazing cultural history and conservation success stories. For instance, some of your birding will be done in private reserves set up specifically for migrating birds. This gives U.S. birders the possibility of seeing a number of familiar birds in their winter homes.

We are offering a 3-night extension to Tikal, perhaps the greatest of the Mayan cities, filled with ancient ruins and great birds. A local cultural guide will add to the experience. As you walk among the pyramids, you should look for Keel-billed Toucan, Slaty-tailed Trogon, Ocellated Turkey, Tody Motmot, several species of parrots, and raptors like the rare Orange-breasted Falcon. You may also see some cool mammals like Coatis, Agoutis, and Spider and Black Howler Monkeys.

John Cahill, only in his mid-20s and already the top birder in Guatemala, is your guide. One comment from a prior tour refers to John as "the best bird guide ever."

He is a birding rockstar and seems to know everyone in the country! Read about John's Big Year here. John will be assisted by his father Rob Cahill. The Cahill Family runs Community Cloud Forest Conservation, which focuses on environmental education for the local Mayan school population based on Cornell Lab of Ornithology's BirdSleuth program. They also run a leadership training program for girls and young women in sustainable agro-ecology, nutrition, cooking, health and family planning, career and educational options, birding and eco-tourism, and other life-skills, with the goal of helping them stay in school and continue their education. The ultimate goal of agro-ecology is re-forestation of the cloud forest.

In addition to a donation to GCBO, a half-acre of cloud forest will be restored, which will offset your in-country carbon footprint while enhancing bird habitat. This tour is an excellent example of sustainable tourism.

2022 Guatemala Birding

Mar 5, Sat (Day 1) – Plan to arrive Guatemala City around 12 noon. You will be met by your guides and head to lunch for an orientation, then drive about 1.5 hours northeast, descending into the dry Motagua Valley. Time permitting, we will do a little birding in the thorn forest until sunset.

Overnight at Hotel Camino Largo in El Rancho. (D)

Mar 6, Sun (Day 2): Motagua Valley – We depart early to the Heloderma thorn-forest preserve located about one hour east of El Rancho. We will hike the trails, getting into both bosque espinoso (thorn-forest) and bosque seco (dry forest), two endangered habitat types restricted to the Motagua Valley. Targets for this area include White-lored Gnatcatcher, Russet-crowned Motmot, Turquoise-browed Motmot, Streak-backed Oriole, Stripe-headed Sparrow, Elegant Trogon, and, with some luck, Yellow Grosbeak and Banded Wren. Returning to El Rancho, we will make a couple more stops in the thorn-forest. After sunset there are chances of picking up both Middle American and Pacific Screech-Owls, as well as Buff-collared Nightjar.

Overnight at Hotel Camino Largo in El Rancho (B,L,D)

Mar 7, Mon (Day 3) – We pack up and depart early for the Salamá Valley, where we will bird the lower Pantin Road for the morning. This gravel road will take us from the scrublands of Salamá all the way up to the cloud forest, going through several habitat types, but we will focus on the lower (and drier) portion of the route. Targets include Cassin's Kingbird, Crested Bobwhite, Botteri's Sparrow, Cinnamon Hummingbird, Lesser Nighthawk, and Ash-throated Flycatcher. As we gain elevation, we may encounter

Great Swallow-tailed Swift, Red Crossbill (type 11, or Central American), the lovely Slender Sheartail, Plumbeous Vireo, and an assortment of wood-warblers.

A two-hour drive takes us to the CCFC Center. In the afternoon we will have some time to bird the grounds and surrounding cloud forest.

*Guatemalan Pygmy-Owl

Mar 8, Tues (Day 4): Rubel Chaim/CCFC Center – Today you'll have a chance to sleep a bit later than previous days, as birding will take place in the vicinity of CCFC Center, including the mountaintop village of Satex. Targets include Guatemalan Pygmy-Owl, Bushy-crested Jay, Brown-capped Vireo, Golden-winged Warbler, Ocellated Quail, Spotted Nightingale-Thrush, Tawny-throated Leaf-tosser, and Blue-throated Motmot. There will be time to tour the grounds and learn about the projects that take place here, including environmental education and reforestation.

Mar 9, Wed (Day 5): Finca las Nubes and Chajbaoc – We leave early for an hour and forty-five minute drive to Finca Las Nubes. Located in the Caribbean foothills north of Cobán, this private nature preserve is dedicated to sustainable forestry and bird conservation and boasts an impressive bird list with over 300 species recorded. We will walk at an easy birding pace for a couple of kilometers; the trail takes us into the dense rainforest. We'll look for Stripe-tailed Hummingbird, Red-crowned Ant-Tanager, Red-capped and White-collared manakin, Stub-tailed Spadebill, Plain Xenops, Dusky Antbird, and Black-faced Antthrush. In the afternoon we will make our way back to CCFC, stopping at Chajbaoc, another private nature preserve near Cobán. Targets here are Buffy-crowned Wood-Partridge, White-faced Ground-Sparrow, Mottled Owl, Guatemalan Tyrannulet, and White-breasted Hawk.

Mar 10, Thurs (Day 6): Laguna Chichoj – After some light birding and breakfast at CCFC we will drive forty minutes to Laguna Chichoj in San Cristobal, Verapaz. Targets include White-throated Flycatcher, Spotted Rail, Ruddy Crake, Limpkin, and an assortment of wood-warblers.

From the lake we will make our way back to Baja Verapaz, roughly an hour and 20-minute drive gets us to La Posada del Quetzal, a hotel located in the cloudforest area. This is another private reserve and we'll look for Olive Warbler, Brown-backed Solitaire, Black-capped Swallow, Spotted Woodcreeper, Hooded Grosbeak, Black-headed Siskin, Yellowish Flycatcher, and many more.

Azure-hooded Jay - J.Cahill

Overnight at Posada del Quetzal (B,L,D)

Mar 11, Fri (Day 7): Cloud Forest Birding - Early departure to Los Ranchitos del Quetzal to look for Azure-hooded Jay, Black-headed Nightingale-Thrush, Eye-ringed Flatbill and Barred Forest-Falcon at dawn. Later in the morning we will try for Resplendent Quetzal and other cloud forest species. Los Ranchitos is another of the private nature preserves in this area. In the afternoon we will bird the trails at the Biotopo del Quetzal, a national park, looking for Scaly-throated Foliage-gleaner, Rufous-browed Wren, Spotted Nightingale-Thrush, Unicolored Jay, Blue-crowned Chlorophonia, Tufted Flycatcher, American Dipper, and Black Thrush.

Overnight at Posada del Quetzal (B,L,D)

Mar 12, Sat (Day 8): Pantin Road & return to Guatemala City - We depart early once again to Los Ranchitos for another shot at some of the more difficult cloud forest species. From there, we will drive some fifteen minutes to the Chocoy wetlands and upper Pantin Road, then bird our way down the road to end up in Salamá. Targets for the pine-oak forest of upper Pantin Road include Belted Flycatcher, Cinnamon-bellied Flowerpiercer, White-eared Hummingbird, Gray-collared Becard, Painted Redstart, Gray Silky-flycatcher, Philadelphia Vireo, Guatemalan Tyrannulet, and with some luck, Maroon-chested Ground Dove. The upper Pantin Road is some of the very best Golden-cheeked Warbler habitat in all of Guatemala. Hopefully, we'll find a few that have not yet migrated. We will bird our way down the Pantin Road before returning to Guatemala City (2h 30m drive).

Overnight at San Carlos Hotel. (B,L,D)

Mar 13, Sun (Day 9): [A] Depart Guatemala or [B] Fly to Tikal (for B scroll down)

[A] For those departing Guatemala, a driver will take you to the airport 2-3 hours before your flight.

NOTE: The order and sites visited may vary due to weather, road conditions and other factors beyond our control. Hotels listed are valid as of printing but may change.

NOTE REGARDING LODGING:

We have selected local lodging near birding sites. All have private hot water bathrooms. Camino Largo and Posada del Quetzal are local inns. The CCFC Center is totally off-the-grid with composting toilets, an experience in itself. Wifi is limited in each. San Carlos Hotel is a very pleasant hotel located near the US Embassy in Guatemala City. In Tikal, the Jungle Lodge runs on a generator with power only mornings and afternoons. The swimming pool can be refreshing after warm jungle days. Casa de Don David is a quaint tourist hotel.
